IVA Line Array Debuts at Cambodia

Bon Om Touk - Water and Moon Festival (11 - 13 November 2008)

The Water Festival in Cambodia takes place each year in October or November, at the time of the full moon, and is the most extravagant and exuberant festival in the Khmer calendar, outdoing even the new year celebrations. For the people of Cambodia, the water Festival in Phnom Penh is the most magnificent traditional festival. For three days Phnom Penh citizens, foreign tourists and peasants from various provinces gather in the capital to celebrate festival night day.

Hundreds of thousands of Cambodian people from all over the country flock the Phnom Penh capital city to observe the three-day Water Festival, one of the country's largest festivities. The Water Festival takes place each year in October or November at the time of the full moon. During these three days, schools, government institutions, NGO offices and companies are closed. Each day, the festival begins with boat races followed by the floating of illuminated cruises along the river in front of the Royal Palace together with fireworks.

“Churning out the entertainment at the Water Festival’s main stage was an IVA Line Array System and powered by IVA Power Amplifiers.”
